Let's Start!

It's Tom's first day at work. Who does he meet? Let's find out!

Learning Outcome

Use information about locations of things to interact with others.

Ask your partner:

- What is in an office?
- What time do you have a coffee break in an office?

Can Do Statements

- I can ask where things are.
- I can say where things are.
- I can express what objects are in an office.

Let's Explore!

Where is Tom's work station? Let's listen!

* Your "work station" is your desk, or the area where you sit and work.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Tom: Hello, I'm Tom Andrews. It's my first day here.
Susan: Hello, Tom. I'm Susan. I can help you.
Tom: Thank you. Where is the work area?
Susan: This is the work area.
Tom: There is a lot of space. Where is my desk?
Susan: Your desk is here, beside my desk. Here is the supply room.
Tom: There are a lot of supplies.
Susan: Ursula gives out supplies and makes copies. Over here is the lunchroom.
Tom: Is there any coffee?
Susan: Here is some coffee and water. Welcome to the team. Now, let's go back to my desk and check your contact information.

Let's Practice!

Are you asking or are you saying where things are?

Instructions: Put the sentences below into the correct category.

Ask Where Things Are	Say Where Things Are

Where is the supply room?
Where are the desks?

Your desk is here.
Where is the lunchroom?

The supply room is over there.
Here is the lunchroom.

Let's Practice!

Let's look at some of the words!

Instructions: Draw a line from the words in column A to the image in column B.

COLUMN A

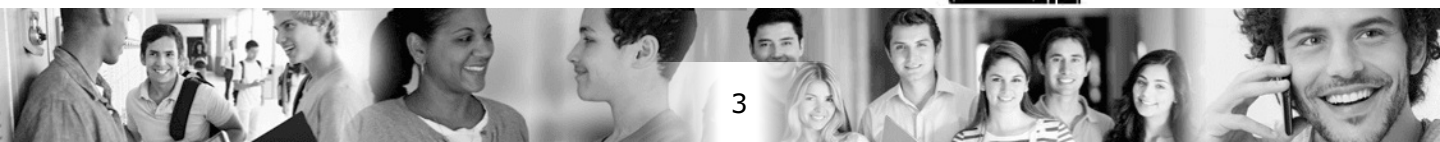

1. work area

2. copy

3. team

4. lunchroom

COLUMN B e.g. I eat in the lunchroom every day.

- team (noun): a group of people who work or play a sport together
e.g. You're a part of our team.

Learning Points

There is, There are

In sentences that introduce things, you use there is (for singular) or there are (for plural).

Singular	Singular	Plural
Long Form	Short Form	Long Form
there is	there's	there are
Example: There is water over here.	Example: There's water over here.	Example: There are supplies too.

Asking Where Things Are, Saying Where Things Are

Here is how you ask about the location of things.

	Verb to be	Object
Where	is	my desk?
Where	are	the supplies?
Where	is	the coffee?

When you say where things are, you name the location.

Examples:

• Alex: Where is my book?

Bruce: Your book is here.

• Adam: Where are the binders?

Brian: The binders are in the supply room.
