Let's Start!

Where is the stapler? Look in the supply room! What else is in the supply room?

Learning Outcome

Accurately use basic information in simple situations.

Ask your partner:

- What do you have in your bag?
- How many pens and notebooks do you buy every month?

Can Do Statements

- I can express amounts using some and any.
- I can say there aren't any, there isn't any.
- I can say there is some, there are some.
- I can ask for and offer help politely.

Let's Explore!

There are a lot of things in the supply room. What is in the supply room?

* "A lot" is two words, not one. It means many or a large number.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Amy: Tom, let's check the supplies. Could you please help me do the checklist?
Tom: Sure I can. What is first?
Amy: Binders?
Tom: There are some.
Amy: What about paper clips?
Tom: There are some paper clips. There is some white paper too.
Amy: Now, check the coffee and water, please.
Tom: There isn't any coffee. There is some water.
Amy: OK, are there any markers?
Tom: No, there aren't any markers, and there isn't any colored paper.
Amy: Last thing on the list - sticky notes!
Tom: There aren't any sticky notes.
Amy: Now, use the list and order from SupplyInc@busmail.com.

Let's Practice!

Practice asking for things - remember to be polite!

Instructions: Write in the missing words. Use There is, There isn't, There are, please, Could.

Amy: _____ you please help me do the checklist?

Tom: Sure I can. _____ some paper clips.

Amy: Check the coffee and water, _____.

Tom: _____ any coffee.

Tom: _____ some water.

Let's Practice!

Learning Points

There Is and There Are with Some, Any and A Lot Of

In sentences that introduce things, you use there is (for singular) or there are (for plural).

With Count Nouns (books)	With Non-count Nouns (water)
There are some ...	There is some ...
There aren't any ...	There isn't any ...

With count nouns you use a plural verb.

some = a small number

Example: There are some pens.

not any = zero

Example: There aren't any pens.

With non-count nouns you use a singular verb.

some = a small amount

Example: There is some coffee.

not any = zero

Example: There isn't any coffee.

Examples:

- There are some cups on the table.
- There isn't any coffee.

Asking Someone to Hand You Something in a Polite Way

You use polite language to ask a person to hand you something at work.

Use Could you please + action ... ?

Use a polite answer like Here you are.

Examples:

- Ashley: Could you please hand me the stapler?
- Bruce: Here you are.
- Amanda: Could you please give me the book?
- Bart: Yes, here you are.
